INFORMATIONAL RESOURCES FOR TEACHING CROSS-CULTURAL ISSUES IN PSYCHOLOGY

G. William Hill, IV, Kennesaw State University (1998)

Overview

This resource* includes lists of books, articles, journals, and Internet resources for teaching cross-cultural psychology and for expanding course coverage of cross-cultural issues. (Note: This resource does not include material for teaching issues related to ethnic diversity within the United States. A good resource for information on ethnic and other diversity issues is Expanding the Psychology Curriculum: An Annotated Bibliography on Multi-Cultural Psychology (1994), which is also available from OTRP.)

* See the companion resource Activities and Videos for Teaching Cross-Cultural Issues in Psychology, which can be downloaded from OTRP-Online or purchased from OTRP on floppy disk for adapting to individual classrooms.

Outline of Contents

Published Resources (pp. 1-7)

I. General Books and Articles (pp. 2-6)

This section includes an extensive bibliography of books and journal articles for increasing course content related to issues in cross-cultural psychology. The bibliography is organized as follows: articles addressing strategies for incorporating a cross-cultural perspective in the curriculum, handbooks and general reference texts, texts for a stand-alone course in cross-cultural psychology, supplemental and activity texts, and resource books and articles for specific topic areas and cultures.

II. Selected Journals That Focus on Cross-Cultural Research (p. 6)

This section lists journals that either focus solely on cross-cultural psychology or commonly include articles on related topics.

III. Resources for Preparing for Cross-Cultural Travel (p. 7)

This section provides an annotated list of resources for teaching about potential difficulties related to cross-cultural interactions and travel (e.g., communication, customs). These books are excellent resources for developing activities to sensitize students to cultural differences. Some activities developed from these resources are included in the companion resource, "Activities and Videos for Teaching Cross-Cultural Issues in Psychology."

Internet Resources (pp. 8-9)

I. ListServe Discussion Groups (p. 8)

This section lists several Internet discussion groups that address research and teaching issues related to cross-cultural psychology.

III. Resources for Preparing for Cross-Cultural Travel

Cushner, K., & Brislin, R. W. (1996). Intercultural interactions: A practical guide. Thousand Oaks, CA: Sage Publications. (ISBN 0-8039-5990-7)

Cushner and Brislin's book contains 100 critical incidents, each with discussion and possible explanations. The incidents are arranged around 8 general situations (e.g., host customs, settling in, tourist, work) and 18 themes (e.g., disconfirmed expectancies, time and space, values, etc.). Each theme also has an accompanying essay. The intent of the authors is to help cross-cultural travelers: (1) avoid stereotypical thinking, (2) be willing to seek more information, and (3) be dissatisfied with obvious explanations of incidents.

Axtell, R. E. (Ed.). (1993). Do's and taboos around the world (3rd ed.). New York: Wiley. (ISBN 0-471-59528-4)

Although geared more to the business traveler, this book is a great general resource for cross-cultural teaching. It includes discussions of what to do and not to do in the areas of protocol, customs, etiquette, nonverbal behavior, gift giving and receiving, and jargon and idioms used by Americans that can be baffling to people of other cultures. Axtell has also published several other "Do's and Taboos" books through Wiley on specific topics related to cross-cultural interactions (e.g., Do's and Taboos Around the World for Women in Business, Do's and Taboos of Humor Around the World, Do's and Taboos of Hosting International Visitors, Do's and Taboos of Using English Around the World, and Gestures: The Do's and Taboos of Body Language Around the World).

Dresser, N. (1996). Multicultural manners: New rules of etiquette for a changing society. New York: Wiley. (ISBN 0-471-11819-2)

Although similar to Axtell (1993), Dresser has a much broader scope and includes topics such as child-rearing practices, clothing, the meaning of colors, what and how to eat, superstitions, and a discussion of rules and practices associated with holidays and worship. Dresser also tends to focus on issues that arise with respect to the increasing diversity of cultures in the U.S.
