Diversity Related Bibliography and Resources

Overview

This bibliography and resource material emerged out of a desire to increase integration of diversity materials into graduate and undergraduate psychology courses. Through collaboration with our local school’s Diversity Committee and Diversity Action Team, we envisioned a resource easily usable and organized by topic that might allow faculty to insert chapters, articles, and websites into class discussions, assignments, and readings. We collected the resources from faculty who teach courses on multicultural and diversity issues or who integrated diversity into their graduate courses. We sought other sources of valuable diversity information, including APA resources, searched various academic databases including PsycINFO, and invited feedback from our local academic community, including students. The result is the present document, which we hope will continue to grow as more resources are recommended.

Who will Benefit from use of this Document?

Although this document was initially developed to help faculty, we believe that students will also gain value from the topical breakdown of the categories. It may help undergraduate or graduate students start their research on a particular multicultural or diversity topic. This resource in no way is meant as an “ultimate” guide; rather, it is a place to start when approaching the topics of diversity and multicultural, cross-cultural, or cultural psychology.

Increasing Focus on Diversity

Increasingly accreditation organizations have recognized the importance of integrating diversity and cultural issues into psychology curricula. For example, the American Psychological Association (APA, 2002) released the Guidelines on Multicultural Education, Training, Research, Practice, and Organizational Change for Psychologists that encouraged psychologists to recognize the importance of diversity and multicultural issues in a variety of settings, including education and the classroom (Guideline #3). In 2005 Thomas wrote of the APA’s increasing emphasis on diversity and multiculturalism. Similarly, professional organizations, such as APA’s Division 2: Society for the Teaching of Psychology (STP, n.d.), have made recent commitments to the “integration of diversity into the curriculum.” Awareness of issues of diversity and cultural difference have clearly penetrated the profession of psychology. Current professionals and future faculty, students, and researchers have inherited the responsibility to continue the development of this awareness. We hope this document will help facilitate these efforts.

Structure of the Document

Section 1: Multicultural, Cross-Cultural, and Cultural Psychology
This section focuses on culture and includes topics in emotion, world view, gender, communication, health care, and more.

Section 2: Ethnicity and Race
This section focuses on ethnicity, race, and issues relating to racism, ethnocentrism, and ethno-cultural differences. Topics are arranged by ethnic group.

Section 3: Additional Diversity Topics
This section includes additional diversity topics such as age, religion, sexual orientation, gender, class, and power. This section also includes readings on teaching diversity.

Section 4: Five must reads for those beginning
This section provides five texts that we consider a good place to start.

Section 5: Websites
This section includes links to important websites that are good resources for various diversity topics.
